ANDREW G. CURTIN.

His Relations to the War, to the Free School System and to the Soldiers' Orphans' Schools.

It was under Curtin as Secretary of the Commonwealth that one of his greatest public acts, then not appreciated, but now enjoyed in its fullest fruition, was performed in the complete organization of the free school system of the Commonwealth. To Thaddeus Stevens the people of Pennsylvania owe an eternal debt of gratitude for giving them the free school system that opened the doors for free education alike to the opulent and to the lowly, but to Andrew G. Curtin they are equally indebted for rescuing the free school system from the crudities and imperfections which were impossible of correction when the measure was passed by a reluctant Legislature. Then our free schools were not universal; there were "non-accepting" districts in many sections of the State, but under his wise and tireless efforts to perfect the most beneficent system ever adopted in Pennsylvania, free education was made universal without regard to class, condition or color, and it was upon the foundation he thus laid that Pennsylvania has built the most colossal benefaction of any State, and to which her people contribute over $5,000,000 annually for the education of her children.

Even before the inauguration of Governor Curtin, three months after his election, civil war had been inaugurated by the South. Several of the cotton States had formally seceded from the Union; the flag of the government had been torn from forts and the flag of the insurgent hoisted instead; arsenals had been rifled of government arms to equip Southern soldiers for the work of death. Rebellion was already upon us, but how to meet it was the gravest problem the statesmanship of any country had ever been called upon to solve. The relations of the States to each other and to the General Government under our Constitution had been disputed from the day that the fundamental law was inaugurated. There were no precedents in history to guide those who were charged with the responsibility of defining the policy of either State or nation. New and appalling conditions confronted the new Governor of Pennsylvania, who was called to his official duties two months before President Lincoln could define the policy of the National Government.

Pennsylvania was a border State, exposed to all the sorrows and devastation of civil war should it come: and while thoroughly loyal to the Union, the people had every interest in the most conciliatory policy toward the Southern States consistent with fidelity to the unity of the Republic. A rash utterance from so great a State as Pennsylvania would have inflamed and strengthened rebellion and weakened the friends of the Union in the South, and a hesitating policy would have inspired treason and clouded patriotism with despair. It was under these circumstances that Governor Curtin was called upon to define a policy, not only for his great State, but practically for the National Government. Only those who then lived in active effort and yet survive can now justly appreciate the agonizing responsibilities which devolved upon him. He was charged with the task of averting civil war, if possible within the lines of honor, and if the conflict must come, to have Pennsylvania ready to throw her whole moral and material power to the uttermost to resist dismemberment of the Republic of our fathers. How wisely he met this emergency, the gravest that ever confronted the Executive of either State or nation, stands out upon the annals of our great Commonwealth, a full generation after the conflict began, as an imperishable monument as perfect in its wisdom as it was heroic in patriotism.

The title of "The Great War Governor," that is familiar to even every child of the Commonwealth, was not an accidental or unmeaning one. He completed the circle of greatness as a War Governor. He met the political issues of the war with such wisdom that his record stands to day unquestioned and with such fidelity that all reverence it. When the murmurings of strife culminated in shotted guns trained against soldiers of the flag, he was the first to summon his people to the defense of the Union and speediest in hastening his regiments to the front. Our laws of both state and nation did not contemplate civil war and troops could be called for but three months' service. The result was that before our troops were ready to fight a battle their terms expired, but the national authorities believed that the war could not last and no practical effort was made to obtain troops for a longer period of service until the disaster of Bull Run taught the North how fearfully in earnest were those who sought to dismember the Union. For several days Pennsylvania was cut off from all communication with Washington by the outbreak in Baltimore that destroyed the telegraph lines and the railroad bridges, and it was in this apparently hopeless emergency that Governor Curtin rose to the full stature of his leadership. In counsel with General Patterson, who was in command of the district embracing Pennsylvania and Maryland, he proposed to the veteran commander to furnish 25 000 fresh troops to serve three years or during the war. The national authorities could not be communicated with, and the peril was so immediate that delay seemed to invite disaster. General Patterson promptly made the requisition upon the Governor and as promptly was the call issued for volunteers.

It was confidently expected that when communication should be opened with Washington, there would be a most grateful response from the national authorities for this heroic action of Pennsylvania's War Governor, but the first order received from Washington was a refusal to accept the troops because they were not needed. In vain did General Patterson and Governor Curtin appeal to Washington to reverse the order, and Senator John Sherman, then a volunteer aid on General Patterson's staff, hastened to the national capital as soon as public travel was opened and personally urged the acceptance of the troops, but they were again refused. Governor Curtin was thus left with a rapidly swelling camp of unorganized soldiers, ready and willing to fight the battles of the republic but rejected by the government that, as was soon proved, was greatly in need of them. He summoned his Legislature and asked that the troops be organized under the State authorities and he was given the power to do so, with a loan of $3,000,000 to defray the expenses. It was this emergency and this failure of the National Government to appreciate the war as Governor Curtin appreciated it, that created the Pennsylvania Reserve Corps.

If Governor Curtin's record as a statesman in defining the policy of the great State at the outset of the war and his record as a patriotic Executive in furnishing troops for every need of the National Government told the whole story of his public life, he would stand out as unexampled in his achievements among the executives of that time; but the other chapters he has written in the story of that fearful conflict would alone make his name immortal among the lovers of free government. Under his guidance his great State led all others in humane provisions for the sick, the wounded and the dead. Wherever the battle raged there were the ministers of Pennsylvania to care for the wounded, nurse the sick, solace the dying and bring the remains of the dead home to their friends for sepulchre. In every hospital a Pennsylvania soldier had but to ask for the representative of the Governor of his State and his wants were supplied. Nor did Governor Curtin's care of his soldiers end with these ministrations. He left one of the proudest monuments of his life in the Soldiers' Orphans' Schools, for the support of which many millions have been paid from the Treasury. On a bleak Thanksgiving Day in the early part of the war, when on his way to worship at his church, two ill-clad waifs met him and asked for alms, and when he heard the trembling voice of one say, "Father was killed in the war," he not only supplied the wants of the little sufferers, but he rested not until he had made the orphans of our soldiers the wards of the Commonwealth. Every orphan of the Pennsylvania soldiers who was left in destitute circumstances found not only support but education under the beneficent law Governor Curtin devised, and there are now thousands of orphans of soldiers who have grown to manhood and womanhood, with happy families by their side, who ever lisp the name of Governor Curtin with praise and reverence in their household circles. Thus in the sorest trials of statesmanship, the severest strain of bloody and desolating war, and in the sublimest offices of humanity, no one Executive of any of our Commonwealths has written such imperishable records.

THE TWO PARTIES.

What the Republican Party Stands For.

The Republican party, by its traditions and tendencies, the teachings of its leaders, past and present, and its whole history, has a steady momentum toward sectionalism, high government, interference with local rule and local control of elections, extravagant expenditures, heavy taxes, bounties, subsidies and exorbitant protection. "Ideas of governmental meddling and centralization dominate it; class interests hold it firmly to evil courses." These things are incompatible with free and pure government. The American people need none of these things: only a small minority really desire them.

What the Democratic Party Stands For.

The Democratic party, by principle and tendency, by the tradition of its elders and its steady momentum, tends to economy, to low taxes, to revenue tariffs, immediate responsibility to the people, and no Federal interference with local rule. These are the very essentials of free and pure government. If the people want these things—and surely they need them more than at any other time in their history—that party, and that party alone, is the instrument they must use to secure them. Upon other great issues also the scale turns in its favor. It is as trustworthy as its opponents on the monetary question, while its ancient financial traditions are sounder than those of any great and long-lived party we have ever had. And—what is truly a crowning merit—it is, and ever has been, a national party.—Chairman Wilson in the North American Review.

A Democratic Revival.

The change for the better in business affairs that is manifest in all parts of the country has brought with it a wonderful revival of courage and confidence in the ranks of the Democratic party. Doubt and despondency have given way before an excess of zeal and spirit that has been as sudden in its manifestation as it is assuring. From all parts of Pennsylvania comes the same glad news. The Democrats will go to the polls and vote in November. There will be no Republican walk-over. All the cocksureness with which Republican orators have been predicting a tidal wave of victory is rapidly dissolving before the reinvigorated spirit of Democracy as the fog is dissipated by the morning sun. In spite of political clamor, of partial crop failure, of speculative timidity, and of the long nightmare of economic misrule from which the country has hardly emerged, its great underlying industries are gathering themselves together and moving slowly, safely and solidly forward. Like the giant Antæus, who grew stronger every time he was thrown prone upon his mother earth, the nation rises newly vigorous from the throes of commercial and industrial disorder and financial panic.

Assured of honest money, of lower tax rates, of cheaper living and of steadier and better business, is it any wonder that the masses of the people take heart and hope? Have they not reason? Do not they see with their own eyes the coming on of better times? Is not the judgment of the masses, as it found expression in 1890 and 1892, vindicated by the event? The prophets of calamity are choked with their own false words. The tide has turned against them.

From this time forward until the day of election the Democrats of Pennsylvania must prove themselves equal to the good fortune which has made the shops and mills and forges and furnaces and mines and manufactories their working, active allies in bringing order out of industrial chaos and political misrule. Every election district in the State should be disputed until the polls shall close on election day with all the vim and vigor which a just cause can inspire.—Phila. Record.

STATE Agricultural Secretary Edge will report to the next Legislature gross irregularities in farm taxation.

Wool Growers and Manufacturers.

BUSINESS AND MARKETS GREATLY IMPROVED AND PRICES BETTER.

The Industrial Revolt against McKinleyism.

The Louisville and Madison woolen mills, at Madison, Ind., are to resume after a long siege of McKinleyism; and the general improvement in the textile market is authoritatively shown in the American Wool and Cotton Reporter, which, in speaking of the spring outlook in soft woolen dress goods, says:

> We have heard of 31 cents on goods which sold at 30 cents last season, and that buyers who got concessions from 30 cents last season have been denied the concession on orders placed this week.

In short, as the Reporter adds, "it is a stronger market every way." No wonder Mr. McKinley has taken refuge in the recesses of the far West, remote from the hum of factories and the click of the looms. He knows that his twenty-one speeches a day would be rejected as stale, flat and unprofitable in contrast with the swelling music of reviving industries.

A Maine woolen mill is experimenting with the manufacture of its wool into suits of clothing upon its own premises. Under the McKinley law this mill did not try any experiments. It was shut down.—N. Y. Mercury.

General Hastings in his speech in Lancaster said there were eighteen furnaces out of blast in that county, for which he held the Democratic party responsible. One of the owners of a furnace in the county takes exception to this statement. He states that there are only twelve furnaces in the county and one at Wrightsville, across the river from Columbia. Of these thirteen, ten went out of blast under the administration of President Harrison and only three under the present administration. Of these thirteen furnaces seven only are modern or have facilities to again go in blast and compete with furnaces in the United States, even with a duty of $10.

The second largest pay day of the year was at Steelton on Saturday, when $71,000 was paid out to the 4,000 employes of the Pennsylvania Steel Company. There is a bright prospect for Fall work at the steel works and the outlook locally has much improved.

Governor McKinley made twenty-one speeches to the Populists of the Northwest on Saturday last. His rampage in that section of the country suggests a realization of the truth that it is vain to talk to the manufacturers, who are too busy now to listen to him, and that his last hope lies in again fooling the farmers.

The large stone quarries along the Philadelphia & Reading Railroad, east of Myerstown, which were not worked for the past two years, will resume operations shortly with a full force of employes. Nearly one hundred men will be given employment.

The Acme Shirt Factory, at Myerstown, A. S. Hummel, proprietor, resumed operations. The factory is being enlarged to accomodate the increasing business. Upwards of eighty persons are employed.

Answers of Manufacturers to Inquiries of the Finance Committee.

Albert Stone, Kintnerville, Pa., hemlock and hardwood lumber.—No duty is needed. My remedy to correct the trouble would be to let the Republicans run the Government the same way they had been doing before the present Administration took it out of their hands. Then let the law of trade loose on them. It had commenced to work before they got it passed over to the present Administration. It would have ground them into powder so fine that a light breeze would have blown away all left of them. —Bulletin No. 23, page 13.

St. Mary's Manufacturing Company, West Virginia.—In this business tariff is a dead letter. Come down to a tariff for revenue basis and do justice to all men. —Bulletin No. 23, page 32.

Huttig Sash and Door Company, St. Louis, Mo.—We are not affected by tariff legislation. The Wilson bill O. K. —Bulletin No. 21, page 81.

Scott & Holston Lumber Company, Duluth, Minn.—We don't need any duty in our business. A general lowering of all duties looking to free trade; a duty on few articles for revenue only. The present Congress promised us that before they were elected.—Bulletin No. 21 page 85.

D. F. Smith, Clam Falls, Polk county, Wis., lumber.—No duty is required. We can manufacture as cheaply in this country as anywhere else, and can compete with other nations on equal footing. I would remove all custom houses and trade even with our neighbors.—Bulletin No. 21, page 126.

Cunningham & Co., Santa Cruz, Cal., lumber.—To place domestic productions on equal footing with the foreign product the rates of duty should be none. Present depression in trade is due to high protective tariff.—Bulletin No. 22, page 28.

George A. Macbeth Company, Pittsburg, lamp glasses.—Competition at home never decreases; last four years no exception one way or the other; high cost under high tariff. We are always forced to small margins under any cost; under no tariff we have wider, larger and hence better market. The Wilson bill could not be improved by adding a whole lot of so-called raw material to the free list. The whole chemical list could be put on the free list. If the bill is the very best that can be done, it is necessary for the party originating it to pass it quickly. It will produce no shock to business, will not increase the depression one iota, and the country has already anticipated the entire action. To me the duty on soda ash and pig is monstrous; both used by thousands of people who have no protection whatever.—Bulletin No. 7, page 143.

Reply of A. M. Guthrie & Co., Pittsburg, Pa., manufacturers of crucibles.—No duty is necessary to place domestic products on a footing with foreign. We desire no duty. We think we should do much more if the Senate will pass the Wilson bill at once.—Schedule B, Bulletin No. 7, page 73.

J. L. Mott & Co., New York, iron pottery.—We are probably the largest manufacturers of sanitary goods in the United States; our works at Mott Haven, just beyond the Harlem River, employing from 750 to 1,000 hands. The earthenware part used in the manufacture of closets and lavatories we import from England. The porcelain baths are not manufactured at all in this country, and now pay a duty of 55 per cent. Now, sir, why the Trenton potters should oppose a reduction in the tariff, or even why they should desire any duty at all, is something of a mystery to us, in view of the fact that they now sell their goods from 20 to 50 per cent. lower than they can be bought in England, i. e., without considering freight or duty. To illustrate this we inclose three exhibits.—Bulletin No. 7, page 76.

Red Wing Stoneware Company, Minn., stoneware.—No duty is necessary to place domestic production on an equal footing with foreign productions. We export (to Canada) 5 per cent. of our manufacture at same price. With free raw material no duty is necessary on manufacture.

R. A. Whitman, Noxen, Pa., lumber.—The duties don't affect me in any way. I believe the present bill in general is what we need, and will have to come to, and the quicker it is settled the better.—Bulletin No. 22, page 99.

A. Lamont Colby, Wisconsin.—We desire neither duty nor protection. We have been in the lumber business since 1867, and watched the trade closely, and we do not think that the price of lumber is affected one way or the other by a tariff duty.—Bulletin No. 22, page 104.

Buzard & McCain, Brockwayville, Pa., lumber.—We do not desire duty or think it necessary. The Wilson bill as it came from the House is satisfactory to us; but pass it quickly.—Bulletin No. 21, page 52.

Campbell's Lumber Company, Ky., manufacturers of lumber.—We don't need any duty in our business. Put lumber on the free list.—Bulletin No. 22, page 62.

Valley Lumber Company, Eau Claire, Wis.—We do not think any tariff necessary. If raw materials were free we need no customs duty.—Bulletin No. 21, page 42.

J. B. Bassett & Co., Minneapolis, lumber.—We ask no duty on our products. Give us free coal, free iron, free salt, free wool and free lumber. Repeal sugar bounty and place 1 cent a pound on it.—Bulletin No. 21, page 58.

Charles Betcher Lumber Company, Red Wing,—In regard to reducing the rates of duty one-third, no reduction in cost of production would be necessary. I desire lowering of duties all around, and as little interference by Government in any business as possible.—Bulletin No. 21, page 59.

Elisha K. Kane, Kushequa, Pa., lumber.—No duty would be required. It is solely a question of land (or stumpage) values. If no duty had never been imposed we would not need any now. I recommend no changes, as all changes are hurtful because disturbing trade. But as we are now prepared by the Wilson bill, hurry it through and be done with it.—Bulletin No. 21, page 63.

Robert Anderson, Poland Clay Company, Ind.—I do not require any duty on lumber, as your committee are no doubt aware that there are large quantities of all kinds of hardwood lumber shipped to Europe. The people of Indiana, yes. I believe of the United States, are very anxious to have this tariff question settled. We believe your honorable body will do right. The greatest good to the greatest number.

Lorain Lumber and Manufacturing Company, O.—We do not think that the removal of the tariff on lumber would hurt the Michigan and Wisconsin lumberman, as a good many of them own large tracts of lumber in Canada, and would give them an opportunity to market their lumber in the United States, which is only held back by the present duty.—Bulletin No. 24, page 77.

J. M. Bloss & Brothers, lumber, Grayville, Ill.—In regard to reducing rates of duty, we don't think the reduction made in the Wilson bill will hurt our business any.—Bulletin No. 22, page 115.

J. C. Livingston & Co., Stratford, N. Y., lumber.—No duty of any kind needed. We want absolute free trade or a tariff for revenue only.—Bulletin No. 24, page 75.

West Virginia Glass Company, Martin's Ferry, O.—Give us free raw material and we do not care much for tariff. We do not expect to feel reductions of tariff and do not expect to reduce wages on that account.—Bulletin No. 8, page 33.

Van Horne, Griffin & Co., Newark, N. J., bent glass. A reduction of one-third of the duty on our goods would make no difference. About 25 per cent. of our goods is exported. There would be no necessity for a customs duty if raw materials were free.—Bulletin No. 8, page 39.

C. & G. M. Hodgdon, East Boothbay, Me., wooden ships.—We desire free trade. Give the shipbuilders free material, either wood or iron, and the American shipbuilder can beat the world in building up a commerce.—Schedule D. Bulletin No. 21, page 7.

Pottstown, Pa., Oct. 9.—An acre of ground has been purchased of Geist, Eck & Egolf, along the Philadelphia & Reading Railroad, in the Sixth ward, for the erection of a new machine shop. The proprietors will be Messrs. John R. Saylor and Richard Stillman, of Philadelphia, employes of the Baldwin Locomotive Works. The new industry will be in operation in a month.

Royersford, Pa., Oct. 9.—Every one of the various industries at Royersford are now in operation. At Spring City all are running except the paper mill and bloom works. The Spring City Glass Works started up this morning on full time.

Lebanon, Pa., Oct. 9.—The revival of business in this vicinity is further shown by the resumption of the Sunbeam Publishing Company, of Annville, which will start up on Friday with 150 employes.

The North Lebanon Shoe Factory has applied for a charter, and will soon begin operations with 200 hands.

The shirtmakers' strike at Freeman & Wise's, No. 24 North Third street, Philadelphia, and Brode & Company has been settled satisfactorily on both sides, by allowing the employes 10 per cent. advance.

Scranton, Pa., Oct. 9.—The North Mill, of the Lackawanna Iron and Steel Company, idle since last spring, will resume operations to-morrow in all departments on double turn, employing 1,200 hands. The period for which the works are to operate is unknown, but the fact that double turn has been ordered leads the employes to think the company has a big order. The South Mills, now temporarily idle, are undergoing extensive repairs.

THE SCARECROW.

John Paul Bocock, in Harper's Young People

When Farmer Jones had shot a crow—
It was no easy task, you know—
He hung it in his corn-field, where
He thought the live crows it would scare.

The crows could not don mourning, since
They always wore funereal tints,
So they resolved to hold a wake
For their departed brother's sake.

They met and mourned him 'mid the corn,
And, growing hungry towards the morn,
Devoured the crops and then withdrew,
Leaving the scarecrow and the view.

A RUNAWAY HEIRESS.

"Not to be opened till I am dead," was the direction of a sealed packet placed by Archibald Baldwin in the hand of his friend, Noel Ware.

"And promise to guard it well," he added.

Noel Ware did not trust himself to speak. He pressed his friend's hand in token of assent, and soon after took his leave.

On reaching his lodgings—he was a bachelor—he locked the packet away in the desk in which he kept his papers.

Then, sitting down, he began to reflect how sad it was that two friends like himself and Archibald Baldwin, after plodding so many years together, should be forced to part at the last stage of the journey, and he should be left to finish it alone.

There had been a bit of romance in the lives of these two. In their youth they had both loved the same woman. Had the wooing of either prospered, they would probably never have been friends. But a third competitor had borne off the prize: and the bond of a common disappointment, in time, strengthened into a tie between the foiled suitors closer than is commonly found to unite two men—or women either, for that matter.

Many years had passed since then. The two friends had stood, in turn, at the graveside of their fortunate rival, and of her whose shrine they had once jointly worshipped—upon whose destitute, orphaned child they henceforward vied with each other in lavishing every care.

And Maud Preston had grown up loving Uncle Archie and Uncle Noel—so she called them—better than most children loved their parents.

She lived with Uncle Archie, who was rich and kept house, but was none the less fond of Uncle Noel, who came to see her, and had so many pleasant stories to tell.

That Maud Preston would one day have Archibald Baldwin's fortune was in everybody's mouth—except Archibald Baldwin's own.

He had a relative—a very distant one, it is true—yet near enough to stand his heir if the law were left to take its course.

Of this kinsman Mr. Baldwin stood not a little in awe; and not without reason, for there was something in Jared Swipe's broad, flat face, with its bas-relief features, that reminded one of an adder when it means mischief.

At the time of which we speak Maud Preston was at school. Uncle Archie's illness had been kept secret from her. "There is always time enough for bad news," said the kindly old man the evening he gave Noel Ware the packet.

But the time was shorter that he thought. When the sun shone in upon Archibald Baldwin's face the next morning seemed that of a man in peaceful slumber.

The servant who came stole noiselessly away not wishing to disturb the sleeper. Useless precaution; from that sleep there was no wakening.

When Noel Ware reached his friend's house, he found Jared Swipe already in possession.

"I've gone over the papers and there's no will," said the latter with an air of insolent triumph.

As soon as he could, decently, Noel Ware hurried home, determined to bring right to light without delay.

He opened the desk, searched a moment, and then stood aghast! The packet was gone!

The more he tried to fathom the mystery the more it battled his efforts, till at last he gave it up and sat down in despair.

He had not the heart to write to Maud. He could not be the first to communicate the ill news that would be sure to reach her soon enough.

That gracious office Mr. Swipe undertook. Coarsely and brutally, after announcing the death of Baldwin he went on to give notice, as that gentleman's successor, that hence-forward Miss Preston "must shift for herself," unless, indeed, she preferred to accept Mr. Swipe as a husband, in which case he offered, in a postscript, "to come down handsome."

When Maud read of Uncle Archie's death her eyes were blinded with tears, but they flashed fire at the concluding words of the letter.

Hastily completing preparations she took kindly leave of the teachers and and schoolmates, and hurried away.

Poor Maud! Here was a sorrowful awakening from pleasant dreams. She had based no calculations on Mr. Baldwin's death—but never, in fact, looked forward to a happy time when she and Arthur Warren would be all in all to each other.

Arthur had been urgent that that time should begin at once, but she knew that his father—a prudent, cautious man, who preferred waiting till Maud's prospects were more assured—did not approve, and so withheld her own consent.

Now she saw but one course open. She could never be a burden to the man she loved, much less an intruder upon his family. She must make her own way in the world, and no time was to be lost.

When Noel Ware and Arthur Warren had both written to Maud, she neither answered nor came in person.

Arthur went to bring her. Imagine his astonishment and grief at finding she was gone, no one knew whither. But he knew Maud well, and guessed at the truth. He would find her.

Most likely she had gone to the city, usually the first resort of those who go "to seek their fortunes." And to the city came Arthur Warren.

His first step was to call on his aunt, when he had told his story, "this is a large place to look up a stray sweetheart in. You——"

"The young lady, mim, who called day befor' yisterday," announced the servant on duty at the door.

"Show her in," said Mrs. Vincent.

A beautiful young lady entered, who had applied for a situation as a governess.

"I have brought you my references, madam," she said, not raising her eyes sufficiently to notice that a gentleman was present.

"I'll be Miss Preston's reference, aunt!" cried Arthur Warren, advancing and taking Maud by the hand; "but she shan't be a governess—not even yours, if I can help it!"

But Maud was bent on having her way. If she failed to get that situation, she must look for another.

As for Arthur's proposition to get married on the spot, regardless of consequences, it met with a refusal so decided that, for fear of making bad worse, he was fain to take his leave, promising not even to see Maud for the present.

But he did see her, the very next day, too, and brought news with him. He had just received a letter from Noel Ware, written under great excitement, in the following extract:

"Eureka! I got on the track of it in Jared Swipe's ugly face! He came to take me to task for having said something about Archie Baldwin's having left a will. He said I had slandered his title, and threatened me with an action for it. As he sat talking a look came over his face that brought back a dream I had like a flash. I had dreamt of catching Jared Swipes, with that look on his face, tampering with the lock of my desk, and of driving him away. Then I dreamt of taking out the packet and hiding it in another place; and in that very place I found it to-day. The paper turns out to be Archie Baldwin's will, in which everything is left to Maud. For Heaven's sake find her and bring her back."

Old Mr. Warren, we need hardly say, didn't object to a match between his son and the richest heiress in the country, and Jared Swipe's face now looks flatter than ever.—N. Y. News.

Curious Epitaphs.

One of the most remarkable and confusing epitaphs ever written, says Youth's Companion, is to be seen on a weather-beaten stone in the quiet churchyard of Culmore, a few miles from Londonderry, Ireland.

"Here lies the remains of Thomas Nicholls, who died in Philadelphia, March, 1753. Had he lived, he would have been buried here."

This is equaled, perhaps, by an epitaph from a tombstone in Ulster, recently copied by a traveler in that country:

"To the memory of Thomas Kelly, who was accidentally shot by his brother as a mark of respect."

Here lies the body of
Benjamin Brinkley,
Who, though Lustie and
Strong, was one
That by misfortune, Shot
Himself With's Gun
In the 23d year of his Age.
He departed this Life
To the Grief of his Parents
Spectators and Wife.

A Dangerous Lot.

"Look at these bottles," said a well-known druggist: "do you notice anything peculiar about them?"

He pointed to an assortment of bottles that were about to be packed up for a customer. Each one bore a label marked in plain letters "Poison." There were also death's heads and crossbones beneath the labels. The bottles were of all sizes and sorts.

"What does it mean? Wholesale suicide—hey?"

"Not by any means. Those are the toilet essence of a young woman of fashion. They are prescriptions for the complexion, sleeping draughts, tinctures, and that large bottle is plain ammonia, but we must mark then all so that in case a juvenile in the family should drink of these contents a Coroner's jury would exonerate us. See?"

"Alas," murmured the other man as he gazed on the deadly assortment, "to this complexion have we come at last!" and he gave an inward thanksgiving that he was still a bachelor.—Detroit Free Press.

FROM MASSACHUSETTS.

The Democrats of Massachusetts last Monday nominated a strong ticket, headed by Hon. John E. Russell for the Governorship. The platform is a thorough-going declaration of Democratic principles. It insists on a continuation of the fight for revenue reform and sound money, and demands that "the untaxed notes of State or national banks shall be the only paper money, and that the Government shall, with the development of a banking system adequate to the demands of trade, retire as rapidly as possible all its legal tender paper money." The resolutions also follow in the lead of the Democracy of Pennsylvania, Ohio, New York and other States in open denunciation of the new Know-Nothingism, which has thus far been carried forward with the tacit acceptance and alliance of the Republican party.

HE COULDN'T JUMP IT.—He had been telling what a tremendously high price he had been charged at the summer hotel where he had spent several weeks and how it had swamped him to pay it.

"What did you pay it for?" inquired a sympathizing friend.

"Couldn't help myself."

"Why didn't you jump it?"

"Jump nothing," was the scornful reply. "You couldn't have got over that bill with anything less than a 40-horse power balloon."—Detroit Free Press.

PARROTS have been taught to amuse by their imitation of the human voice, and now their powers in this respect have been made use of for a practical purpose. At almost every station on a German railway the station master has a parrot or a starling so trained that whenever a train draws up at the platform it commences calling out the name of the station most distinctly, and not only this, but it continues doing so while the train remains there. This has been found an excellent mode of informing the passengers where they are.—Ref. Church Messenger.

HELP FOR THE PARENTLESS.—"Now, that is what I call an appreciation of the proper thing."

"What in the world are you talking about?"

"About that South Side grocer's contribution of a barrel of self-raising flour to the orphan asylum."—Indianapolis Journal.

Our Washington Letter.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 5, 1894.

Editors of Compiler: Secretary Lamont, who has never taken any part in the Democratic factional fights which have made New York a doubtful State, instead of the Democratic State which it ought to be, and would be with the Democrats united, has gone to New York to use his influence to bring about harmony in the State campaign.

The annual report of the Commissioner of Indian Affairs, just made public, takes strong ground in favor of encouraging the local authorities by money payments to co-operate with the government in getting the Indian children into the public schools and says that the policy which resulted in a reduction of $75,000 in the amount appropriated by Congress for contract schools for the current fiscal year will be continued by the government until the Indian children are all absorbed in the public schools.

Gen. Wade Hampton, U. S. Railroad Commissioner, has just returned from an official tour over the Pacific Railroads. He says the roads are in good condition and that they are doing as good business as could be expected. A detailed report of his trip will be made to the Secretary of the Interior, who will include it in his annual report to the President, which will be submitted before Congress reassembles. Gen. Hampton says that many people he met in California were clamorous not only for government control of the Union and Central Pacific railroads, but of all others. He is opposed to the idea in toto. Speaking on the subject, he said: "In the first place the bonds of these roads held by the government are not due until 1897, and the government cannot foreclose until default has been made in their payment. Then it becomes a question of expediency. If the government should foreclose, having only the second mortgage, it would be compelled to pay the first mortgage, amounting to many millions. Even then the government would find itself in possession of roads without terminals. A government such as ours cannot operate railroads. In autocratic governments it is possible, but not in this. The demand for foreclosure of the Pacific roads does not come from the best informed people of the Pacific coast, although it has become popular in the west."

Hon. John S. Seymour, Commissioner of Patents, who has just returned from his home in Connecticut, reports the Democratic party in that State as in a splendid condition and enthusiastic over the unusually strong State ticket it has nominated, and as making an aggressive fight in the Congressional districts. He says that nearly every manufacturing interest in the State is helped by the new tariff in one way or another. He itemizes the benefits thusly: "Free lead and free copper will help the brass goods manufacturers. Free wool will aid the makers of many lines of textile goods, and free alcohol in the arts has long been demanded by the hat makers, to whom it is a necessity. Free lumber and reduced duties on coal and iron ore will also be appreciated by the manufacturers, while they can find no fault with the textile schedules." Still, the Republicans are claiming Connecticut as certain. It does seem to be certain—certain to go Democratic.

The populists in two of the Alabama districts must have had difficulty in finding candidates for Congress, or they would not have nominated two men who are well if not favorably known in Washington. One of these men—Mr. Howard—is the author of one of the filthiest books ever put on sale in Washington, with the sacrelgious title of "If Christ Came to Congress," and the other—Lee Crandall—has for years been the editor of a Washington weekly paper which has existed solely for the purpose of selling its columns to whoever would buy. Alabama Democrats should experience no difficulty in beating such men as these.

FOR THE CONSIDERATION OF THE FARMER.

The Star and Sentinel takes exception to our statement that the Republican party has never done anything for the farmer. We prove our assertion by simply drawing attention to two well known facts which can be neither denied nor disputed. They are these: Ever since the war the farmers financial condition has become worse and worse. Secondly, ever since the war the Republicans have had control, except for a few years, of the reins of the government.

The Star may argue and continue to argue but it can not change these conditions nor can it make the farmer believe that they are not true nor can it make the farmer believe that he does not know his own business.

Of what use is it for the Star to state that the price of wheat is low. We all know that and we know that it has been becoming lower for the last thirty years. There are a number of reasons why wheat is low and why there is no money in the most honorable and most useful of occupations, and circumstances, which are these reasons—are chargeable to the Republican robbery of the poor to give to the rich. Protection, of necessity, cuts off a foreign market, thus taking away from the farmer his right to markets of the world and causes the farmer to buy at protected prices, thus giving the manufacturer the opportunity to charge beyond the worth of his goods. This, though an old argument, is as true as it was when first brought before the people and it was this argument which elected Mr. Cleveland in 1892—the tariff of equality.

Why does not the Star and Sentinel say something about the good prices of corn? If it wants to print the market reports truthfully, it ought to mention this most important crop. It only prints such parts of the report as it can use in trying to make the people believe in calamity howling. Corn is a poor crop this year, and, being therefore scarce, is high in price. That is all there is to it. If the surplus of American wheat could be shipped to countries which need it and would use it, it would become scarcer and therefore higher in price. This is very plain and anybody can understand it without a column of argument.

We repeat that the Republican party is the party of the moneyed men and of the trusts. Who has reaped the benefit of Republican administration? Certainly not the farmer. Who has begun an investigation of the trusts and other incorporations which draw large sums of money from the treasury each year? Certainly not the Republicans, for they have never begun any reform in any direction.

ALMS-HOUSE MANAGEMENT.

As is often the case, that which receives the unqualified approval of every one who knows anything about the facts, comes to be the subject of unjust criticism by one who does not know the facts, or will not open his eyes to them. This is the situation of the Alms-house management and its critic, the Republican organ.

The only criticism made is that the management costs too much. It costs too much as this organ looks at it through Republican spectacles, in the face of a political campaign, when it would move heaven and earth to wrench the control of the management from the Democratic party for self interest.

We assert that the management is an economical one and does not cost one cent more than it should. It is the question of a fool to ask why the institution costs more in 1893 than in 1892 and it might be answering a fool according to his folly to ask why $1,623 was spent for pork in 1872 and $630 in 1893? Why do the expenditures of any housekeeper vary a few hundred dollars more in one year than in another? Contingencies had to be met in one year that were not met in another. As sometimes happens in the Alms-house accounts a few bills of one year are not presented and become saddled on a succeeding year to which they do not belong. This state is always followed by a less total expense in the next year. 1893 was higher than 1892, 1892 was lower than in 1891, and 1891 was higher than in 1890. To compare the expense of the last year with any year a generation ago or two generations ago is unjust and dishonest criticism. Go back to 1852 or 1872 and any citizen ought to blush to recall the situation at that which was called charity at the county home. A condition where the sane and insane poor were huddled together in the same building, and in a building so poorly constructed and of such an age that each year it became more unfit for the habitation of human beings. The old main building reached such a stage that the insurance companies condemned it and cancelled their policies upon it. The new building then became an absolute necessity. The insane department was made separate since 1872 as any humane management would dictate it should be. The late addition to the insane department became an absolute necessity as the department being crowded, new patients had to be sent to Harrisburg. This kept up until the county had from 10 to 12 insane at Harrisburg at an expense of from $1,000 to $1,200. Recalling these insane, the interest on the expense of the addition is but $400, a clear saving of from $600 to $800. Could these changes be effected and accommodations be made with an eye to the future without increasing the expense account? A fool could hardly answer yes. The coal needed to heat the new buildings was much greater than in the old small buildings. More labor to look after the new buildings was required. The wonder is that all this was done with the slight increase to the expense account that was.

Adams county is now provided with the plant, an Alms-house, to answer the needs of the county for years to come. Every one can realize and appreciate the truth of the proposition that a few less or a few more to the number of inmates would not diminish or increase the running expenses. Adams County Alms-house could add 25 to its population without increasing its expenses. It added two-thirds that many during the winter just past without any increase. Adams County Alms-house has the accommodations for the number of inmates that are in any of her sister counties' Alms-houses with the exception of York, and could support such a population in her plant, her buildings, at a less expense than any of the neighboring counties. To rate the expenses per inmate is unfair, for should there be but half the number of inmates there are, almost the same amount of help and officers of the Board would be required, the farming expenses would be the same and many similar items.

A word as to the Out-door Relief system. Organized charity all over the country condemns the giving of money. The Directors in making the change from giving money to giving orders for necessaries, the orders to be returned endorsed with necessaries given, happened to ask an officer of their Board—the Attorney—to put into running order such a system, which necessitated the obtaining and comparing of other systems in the State. When the system was in working order, the same officer of the Board was asked to continue to look after the relief as the one most familiar with it. This new system has received the unqualified endorsement of all citizens acquainted with it and has resulted in a saving to the county of $400 per year. Learning that parts of from 150 to 200 days are given to all the minutiae of this system the work at $100 is underpaid and would be just payment to any one else looking after it, and for want of a better name this department goes under the name of Out-door Relief Treasurer.

Lastly, one settlement of the Steward with the Treasurer for monies received from sale of produce is easier than a dozen. Emergencies at the institution constantly arise between meetings that make necessary a deposit in bank at the hands of the Steward. The only concern is that the balance found to be in the hands of the Steward is turned over eventually to the Treasurer, and this is always the case to the last penny.

In conclusion, it is to be remarked that the Alms-house management is a most efficient one. That a better kept institution cannot be found in the State. That the management has labored for years to advance the County Home where it would be a credit to the county and its citizens and give a comfortable home to its unfortunate inmates. That the management has succeeded in this is a matter for every citizen to be proud of. The management should receive an unqualified endorsement and approval at the polls, as it deserves to receive and as it has received from all other competent judges of the situation.

CHAS. S. DUNCAN, Esq., Democratic candidate for the senate in the Adams-Cumberland district, was in Chambersburg last night and this morning. He has been making an enegetic canvass and has made new friends wherever he has gone. The district could not do better than send him to the senate by a large majority.—Chambersburg Valley Spirit.

LAST week the Star made another of its little mistakes. The Democratic majority in Georgia is 30,000 not 10,000.

OVER half a million dollars' worth of potatoes were imported from Scotland to this country for the nine months ended with June last.

If the potato crop in this country shall prove insufficient for home consumption, as seems probable, the reduction of duty from 25 cents to 15 cents a bushel will prove a boon to the hungry poor. It will also help the farmers who may have to buy next year's seed.

JUDGE WILLS reports that Mountpleasant is solid for Judge Wills. Wonderful self-assurance.

JOHN A. ROCKWELL.

A young man, born and bred in Adams county, John A. Rockwell, enlisted at the opening of the Rebellion as a private in the 107th Regt. Pa. Vols. He served over three years. At the battle of Gettysburg, his regiment was in the 1st Corps, under Gen. Reynolds, and was in position on Seminary Ridge, near the house of Robt. Sheads. His company numbered thirty-six men when it entered and took part in the engagement on July 1st, 1863. After the fall of Gen. Reynolds and the retreat began, this young man came toward Gettysburg over the fields, across the "tapeworm" railroad, barely escaping with his life and from being taken a prisoner. He reached Cemetery Hill and was one of the five out of the thirty-six in his company who responded to roll call on July 2d, 1863. That day he was placed among the reserves in Ziegler's Woods. On July 3, he and his comrades were placed in position with other troops under command of the gallant Hancock. There he was during the terrible artillery duel of that day. There he was bravely fighting when Pickett and his men made their famous charge.

There is certainly no Democrat in the county who can refuse Mr. Rockwell his support and vote. There ought to be no Republican or any citizen of any political party to refuse Mr. Rockwell his vote. Every citizen of Adams county should esteem it a privilege to honor Mr. Rockwell, and doubly so when he is in every way qualified for the position for which he was nominated. The people of Adams county as a body should, his party must show their esteem of Mr. Rockwell with a grateful and large majority.

A FEW PENSION FACTS FOR THE EDITOR OF THE STAR TO THINK ABOUT.

During the four years of Democratic administration—from 1885 to 1889—a little over 80 per cent. of all the claims filed were allowed. During the preceding Republican administration the average was but 78 per cent., and during the last Republican administration (Tanner and Raum) only 67 per cent. of the claims filed were allowed.

During the four years of Democratic administration — from 1885 to 1889—$296,458,741 25 were paid for pensions, fifteen and one-half millions more than were paid during the fifteen years of Republican administration from 1861 to 1875, inclusive; and, including the estimates for the current fiscal year, Democratic administrations under Judge Lockren and General Black, have, in five years, disbursed $5,750,000 more than all the Republican administrations in the twenty years from 1861 to 1880 inclusive.

The total disbursements for pensions since 1861 were, in round numbers, $1,730,500,000. During sixteen years of that time, counting the present Congress, the Democratic party in the House of Representatives, under the leadership of Randall, Carlisle and Crisp, originated appropriation bills for 64 per cent. of this amount, in round numbers, $1,109,000,000; while during eighteen years under the control of the Republican party, but 36 per cent., in round numbers $621,000,000 were disbursed, or a net ratio of nearly 200 per cent. in favor of the Democratic party.

Soldiers of the republic, does this show the Democratic party has been ungenerous to the heroic men who saved the flag from tarnish, or to their dependents? Wherein have Democratic administrations been inimical to the pensioners of the nation?

What have the Democratic President and party done since the war to make good their promises, to show a sincere sense of the sacred debt due the defenders of the Union and merit the confidence of a grateful, generous country? The United States statutes furnish the proper answer.

Cleveland approved the act of Aug. 4, 1886, increasing the pensions of 10,030 cripples, armless and legless veterans, from $24 to $30; $30 to $36, and from $37.50 to $45 per month.

Act of March 19, 1886, considering the past alone, increased from $8 to $12 per month the pensions of 79,989 widows and dependents on the rolls at that time, as well as the tens of thousands who have since been placed there. These 79,989 certificates were issued by a Democratic Commissioner of Pensions without one cent of expense or a moment's unnecessary delay to these deserving beneficiaries, and with no hindrance to other just claims pending before the office.

Act of May 17, 1886, amending the reports of the War Department, which discriminated against a large and worthy class of soldiers, relieving thousands of unfortunate veterans of hardships, worked by the resting of charges against them, based upon technical errors in the records.

Act of January 29, 1887, benefiting about 30,000 survivors and widows of the Mexican War, to whom more than $15,000,000 had been disbursed.

Act of June 7, 1888 granting arrears to widows from the date of death of the husband, and providing that all United States officers authorized to administer oaths should administer all oaths required to be made in pension cases in the execution of vouchers for pensions free of charge—a just and humane act. This act in the past alone benefited more than 200,000 soldier's widows, and was inspired by that universal regard for the decencies of life, which urged that this worthy class should suffer no discrimination in refraining from an unseemly scramble for pensions, ere ceased the last strains of the requiem over the dead soldier-husband's remains.

Act of August 14, 1888, for the relief of certain appointed or enlisted men in the navy or marine corps from technical charges against them in the records, which stood between them and pensions to which they were justly entitled.

Act of August 27, 1888, increasing pensions on account of deafness.

Act of February 12, 1889, granting an increase in pension from $72 to $100 per month to all persons who in the line of duty, in the naval or military service of the United States, lost both hands. More than thirty of this extremely unfortunate class were benefited by this act immediately on the date of its passage.

Act of March 1, 1889, relating to the payment of pensions to the widows or dependent heirs where subsequent to the issuance of the check the pensioner dies.

Act of March 2, 1889, removing certain technical charges in the record, and relieving a large and meritorious class of volunteer and regular soldiers of the late war and the war with Mexico, placing them in an honorable light before posterity and the comrades with whom they fought side by side.

THE Massachusetts Democratic convention, Monday last, nominated John R. Russell for governor and adopted a platform calling for the retirement of the Democratic senators who opposed the Wilson bill.

MR. SINGERLY and his colleagues on the State ticket, accompanied by Governor Pattison, Secretary Harrity, Attorney General Hensel and a number of the most prominent Democratic orators of the State will begin a tour of Pennsylvania October 22.

ALMS-HOUSE MANAGEMENT.

All the Officers Deserve Commendation.

"The accomodations provided for the care of the poor of this county (Adams) are now admirable. The buildings were in perfect order—every place was clean and tidy. The appearance of the inmates was neat and what is of greater importance they were themselves all contented and happy. Nothing could surpass the cleanliness and neatness of the building provided for chronic insane. From Steward down, all who are engaged in the care of this establishment deserve commendation. For several years past, it has shown marked improvement and it would not now be recognized as the place which existed some few years back."—Extracts from Report of Board of Public Charities of Penna.

"We have visited the Almshouse and inspected the buildings and various departments thoroughly and find them well kept and in good condition. The officials of these institutions deserve credit for the manner in which they are kept."—Extract from Report of Grand Jury, Nov., 1893.

"We have visited the Alms-house and buildings and found everything in and about them in a cleanly and orderly condition, the unfortunate inmates being well cared for and made as comfortable as their circumstances admit, evincing unremitting attention on the part of the Steward and Matron."—Extract from Report of Grand Jury, April 1894.

The Board of County Auditors, a majority of whom are Republicans, carefully and thoroughly audited the Alms-house accounts of 1893, finding them correct in every detail. Not a single expenditure was critised as unnecessary.

The Republican Director of the Poor is quoted as having said "everything about the Alms-house is right as far as I can see."

Officers of other alms-houses in the State, visiting here last week, pronounced our Alms-house to be a model one.

The visiting members of the Board of Public Charities this year came to Alms-house near midnight, having to awaken the Steward to gain admission, and made a thorough inspection, resulting in a verdict highly praising the condition of Alms-house and its management.

FOR WOOL GROWERS.

Market prices, the best guide as to trade conditions, show that for the last month the market has been strong and prices advancing.

The Wool and Cotton Reporter, by far the greatest authority in America on textiles, devotes considerable space every week to a 'Bulletin of New Enterprises."

Forty mentions of new mills, 73 of enlargements and improvements, 96 of mills starting up, and only two (or possibly five) of mills idle because of lack of orders is the record for the first month under free wool.

Free wool has caused the change from idleness to activity. It is setting the spindles to turning and bringing thousands of new ones into existence.

The Dry Goods Economist of September 29 says:

"The worsted yarn trade is in a first rate condition. Spinners are all very busy and unable to supply yarns as users require them." Under the heading "Woolen" it mentions 4 new mills, 8 mills starting up and 1 shutting down. One of the mentions says that every mill in Hudson, N. Y., started up full-handed and on full time on Monday, September 17; 1 mill starts up with 16 new looms; another after being closed down "several years," and others after being closed a year.

"The market has a firm appearance now, and holders have such control of it that they refuse to yield. Buyers are apparently willing to pay good prices for desirable goods, and the trade this week of about 600,000 lb. was mostly of this character. It was expected that the September sales in London would improve prices here, but they were disappointing. Nevertheless, the home market appears strong enough to advance even in the face of this foreign depression. The outlook is decidedly better for larger trade."

Read further on this question from an article on the first page. The calamity howlers are silenced by the quick and steady advance in trade during the last few months These are the best arguments in favor of the present administration which has consideration for farmers and laborers.

Does Not Care for the Tax-payer.

Did the gentleman who has been nominated for Assembly by the Republicans, when he stood up recently in the School Institute, in York Springs, and defiantly asserted that he did not care for the Tax-payer, direct his reference alone to the faithful constituency of his own school district?

This is a matter that should, at once, be fully understood, from the fact that the honest voter and the Tax-payers of the county at large may not care to be represented in the state legislature by a man of that caliber. The people generally may not possess these peculiar graces of long suffering and tender compassion which has characterized Latimore township in keeping in office for a quarter of a century a man who, in the end delares that he does not care for their most vital interest.

The Wheat Crop.

According to the latest official estimates of the wheat yield for 1894, the aggregate will hardly be less than from 450,000,000 to 475,000,000 bushels. If to this is added the estimated surplus of 100,000,000 bushels, we have nearly 600,000,000 bushels on hand, awaiting a market. Where will a market be found for this immense aggregate? At the low rates at which this leading cereal is now selling, it would seem as though European nations, whose crops have been partial failures this year, would become heavy purchasers, but there is nothing to indicate a demand from that direction.

The same authority estimates the corn crop at only 1,100,000,000 bushels, which is nearly 500,000,000 bushels less than that of 1893.

LIFE OR DEATH?—It is of vital importance that it should be understood by persons whose kidneys are inactive, that this condition of things is finally inductive of a state of the organs where life hangs in the balance. Bright's disease, diabetes, albuminuria are all diseases of a very obstinate character in their mature stage, and all have a fatal tendency. They often battle the most practised medical skill, and the most approved remedies of materia medica. But opposed at the outset—that is to say, when the kidneys begin to discharge their functions inactively—with Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, the dangerous tendency is checked. Very useful, also, is this household medicine for those ailments of common occurrence—constipation, biliousness, dyspepsia and nervousness. It is a safeguard against malaria and averts chronic rheumatism.

THERE is no medicine so often needed in every home and so admirably adapted to the purposes for which it is intended, as Chamberlain's Pain Balm. Hardly a week passes but some member of the family has need of it. A toothache or headache may be cured by it. A touch of rheumatism or neuralgia quieted. The severe pain of a burn or scald promptly relieved and the sore healed in much less time than when medicine has to be sent for. A sprain may be promptly treated before inflammation sets in, which insures a cure in about one-third of the time otherwise required. Cuts and bruises should receive immediate treatment before the parts become swollen, which can only be done when Pain Balm is kept at hand. A sore throat may be cured before it becomes serious. A troublesome corn may be removed by applying it twice a day for a week or two. A lame back may be cured and several days of valuable time saved or a pain in the side or chest relieved without paying a doctor bill. Procure a 50-cent bottle at once and you will never regret it. The petition of Jane Jacobs for discharge as administrator of Abraham Jacobs, was filed.

An order was directed to Julia K. Topper, executor of the will of Anna Krise, to sell the undivided half interest of decedent in the real estate, upon giving bond in the sum of $3,000.

Sale was awarded of the real estate of Jacob Lefever, directed to John N. Slifer, executor, upon giving bond in the sum of $1,800.

Citation was awarded on Edward Sheffer, guardian of Ida J. Myers (nee Baugher) to file and exhibit a full and final account and pay over the money coming to the ward, and on Henry J. Schriver, administrator of the estate of Peter Rimbaugh, commanding him to exhibit and file a just account and make a true statement of the estate, in the office of the Register.

Rule was awarded on Walter J. Beamer, guardian of Charles M. Schwartz, to show why he should not pay a certain sum of money to his ward per year.

Inquest of the real estate of Charles Artzberger was confirmed and heirs cited to appear and accept or show cause.

Permission was granted to S. J. Wolf, administrator of Adam Wolf, deceased, to bid at the sale of the real estate of decedent, upon consent of his bondsmen.

The Hagerstown Fair.

At least 30,000 people gathered at the Hagerstown Fair on Thursday. Throughout the whole four days the attendance was exceptionally large. Racing was the especial feature, although the stock, machinery and fancy goods exhibits were enormous. Every one of the districts concerned in the Fair was well represented both in people and goods sent for exhibition. All the departments were well filled, accommodations have been added for about sixty additional cattle and fifteen horses, and one hundred new sheep pens built. Likewise, since the last exhibition there has been provided a large annex to the poultry department, the building formerly serving as a carriage bazar being converted into a poultry building, and a sixty foot addition being put to the machinery hall to take the place of the bazar. The grand stand was increased in size fifty feet and there was erected another band stand.

The management of the Hagerstown Fair is to be complimented upon the success of the efforts to make it a "big thing." The gentlemen who managed the Fair are like the people of Hagerstown, having the necessary "go" and generosity.

Philadelphia Visitors.

Mayor Edwin S. Stuart, of Philadelphia, made his first visit to Gettysburg on Friday, accompanied by a small party of relatives. In the evening the Grand Army Band serenaded him at the Eagle. He appeared on the verandah, and, after a brief introduction by D. McConaughy, Esq., expressed his thanks for the compliment, as well as his admiration of our battlefield.

On Saturday afternoon a special over the Reading brought a party of about 50 Columbia Club excursionists from Philadelphia, Corporal J. L. Smith at the head of the party. During their stay they made a tour of the field. Saturday evening, under escort of the Grand Army Band, they marched to Brua Chapel. The campus was lighted with the blaze of Roman candles as the procession passed from the gates to the Chapel, the fireworks having been brought by the visitors and set off by the students. Mr. Smith called the assembly to order and made an address. Mr. John Wiseman, in the name of the Club, presented the College with a large map of Pennsylvania, which was received by President McKnight.

With the party were a number of veterans of the Corn Exchange regiment, members of which regiment captured a goose from Mr. Daniel Keefauver, at Green Mount, in 1863, and in 1889 presented him with another. This goose is still in the possession of Mrs. Keefauver, and was on exhibition at the Eagle Hotel during their stay.

MATRIMONIAL.

Walter--Thomas.

The commodious home of Mr. and Mrs. G. W. Thomas, at Table Rock, was the scene of a very pretty home wedding on Thursday evening, when their only daughter, Miss Lettie A., was married to Mr. John C. Walter, Rev. M. M. Noacker, of the Reformed church, of Arendtsville, performing the ceremony. Miss Blanche Bender, of Altoona, attended the bride and Mr. Kempher Thomas, brother of the bride, was groomsman. Miss S. March played the wedding march. The bride wore a handsome dark blue traveling costume and carried a boquet of pinks, the groom wearing conventional black. About eighty guests witnessed the ceremony, and the presents were numerous and costly. A sumptuous supper followed the ceremony and the happy pair started next morning on an extended trip. The printers were not forgotten, and they extend best wishes.

Devine--Groft.

Last Tuesday, in the church of the Sacred Heart, Conowago, Rev. Father O'Leary married Mr. Francis J. Devine, son of Mr. James Divine, of Edgegrove, and Miss Rose Groft, only daughter of Mr. Lewis Groft, of Irishtown, in the presence of near relatives. Miss Annie Devine, sister of the groom, served as bridesmaid and Bernard S. Jenkins, son of Hon. John L. Jenkins, as best man.

Orndorff--Buddy.

The same morning, in St. Aloysius church, Littlestown, Very Rev. T. J. Crotty united in wedlock Mr. Harry Orndorff, of Two Taverns, and Miss Ellen Buddy, of near Littlestown. Only the most intimate friends of the bride and groom were in attendance. Miss Alice Buddy, sister of the bride, served as bridesmaid and William Sneeringer as best man.

Offutt--Jenkins.

Miss Mary Emily Jenkins was married last Thursday night, at her home, 400 Cathedral street, Baltimore, to Mr. Milton W. Offutt. The bride is the daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Felix Jenkins, and a niece of Hon. J. L. Jenkins. The groom is a prominent member of the Baltimore county bar.

Upper Bermudian Pastorate.

The Upper Bermudian pastorate consists of the Upper Bermudian congregation in Adams county, and the Zion's congregation in Cumberland county, Pa. The membership, composed chiefly of thrifty and well-to-do farmers and members of their families, is nearly four hundred. The congregation from which the pastorate gets its name, is supposed to be the oldest Lutheran congregation in Adams county. It is mentioned in the Hallische Nachrichten. Its first house of worship, a log structure, was erected in 1712. This was replaced in 1835 by a small brick building, and this again by the larger present house of worship, which bears the date 1885. Its records of baptisms and communions began in 1791. The Rev. J. Ulrich is the first pastor who made these records in English. Among the earlier pastors was the Rev. John Herbst, who was chiefly instrumental in securing the location of the Theological Seminary at Gettysburg, and the Rev. Daniel Gotwald. Last July the Rev. W. G. Slifer, fresh from the Seminary at Gettysburg, took charge of this pastorate. On September 30th, he was installed by Drs. E. J. Wolf and J. W. Richard, the former delivering the charge to the people and the latter that to the pastor.

Brother Slifer has won the confidence of his people, and has already succeeded in organizing two large catechetical classes, and in increasing the attendance at the services of public worship. The field is an important one, and much good can and will be done by brother Slifer, who gives promise of unusual efficiency in the pastoral office.—Lutheran Observer.

Lower Marsh Creek Congregation.

The Lutheran Synod.

The West Pennsylvania Lutheran Synod, composed of the churches in Adams, Cumberland, Franklin, Fulton and York counties, opened its 70th annual meeting in the First Lutheran church, Chambersburg, on Wednesday evening at 7.30 o'clock. The body is made up of 200 clerical and lay delegates, representing 132 congregations and 22,867 members.

The attendance at the first session was large, and the sermon was delivered by Rev. Dr. Wolf, of this place, from Romans 12:1-5, which was listened to with rapt attention. Rev. E. H. Leisenring conducted the liturgical service. The administering of the communion was of a solemn and impressive character and was for the ministers alone.

On the convening of the first business session Thursday morning, Rev. M. Ort, of Mechanicsburg, the retiring president, made his report, which was very interesting. One death occurred during the year, that of Rev. L. K. Secrist, York county. Ten new members were received into Synod from other Synods. Three new congregations were organized and four new churches were dedicated. One member, Rev. Dr. Joel Swartz, asked for a dismissal to the Congregational association of Ohio.

The statistical secretary, Rev. J. A. Hartman, read a report of the statistical and financial work of the year, which was as follows:

The election of officers followed: President, Rev. W. S. Freas, D. D., York; Secretary, Rev. J. A. Metzger, Hanover; Treasurer, Jere. Carl, York.

Thursday's afternoon session was taken up by the consideration of the new constitution. The evening service was in the interest of Beneficiary Education, Rev. P. Livingston making the address.

The request of the Rev. Joel Swartz, D. D., for an honorable dismissal to the Congregational Association of Ohio, was granted.

The report of the Directors of the Theological Seminary at Gettysburg was received and adopted. In accepting the report of the committee on the same the synod gave its hearty approval to the action of the board in erecting a new recitation hall at a cost of $75,000 and a fourth professor's house. The financial secretary, Rev. P. G. Bell, Altoona, was cordially commended to the pastors in his canvass for funds.

The following clergymen were elected delegates to the general synod: Revs. E. J. Wolf, D. D., Gettysburg; H. B. Wile, Carlisle; E. H. Leisenring, Chambersburg; A. Stump, York; H. L. THE SEMINARY.

At the meeting of the Evangelical Lutheran Synod at Frostburg, Md., the Directors of the Seminary in this place reported 74 students in the institution. Of these 24 graduated last year for the ministry. The report farther states that new buildings and improvements cost $750,000, $30,000 of this debt being liquidated, and that the school is in a most prosperous condition. Geo. Beiswanger, Chas. G. Bikle, Wm. L. Heiser were licensed for one year.

The Low Price of Wheat.

A Great Man's Idea as to the Cause.

In a speech delivered in Charlestown, W. Va., last Monday, Mr. Wilson said: Fellow-citizens, ladies and gentlemen, I never realized as I have to-day the truth of the saying that one of the chief pleasures of going away from home is the enjoyment of coming back to it. Your kindness to-day, your reception to me upon the borders of our country, the warm grasp of your hands, have made me realize and understand far more than I could possibly have done the real significance of this saying. I cannot attempt and I shall not try to make my personal acknowledgment to the people of Jefferson county for this welcome to my home. There are some thoughts that refuse to rise higher than the throat, and there are some feelings that refuse to be articulated. I beg you to believe that such are the thoughts and such are the feelings with which I stand before this magnificent assemblage of my neighbors to-day.

But, my fellow-citizens, I know full well that this great demonstration does not sink into merely a personal welcome to a country man and to an old friend, or even a welcome to a candidate for a public office. It speaks with unmistakable emphasis your devotion to the great cause. It speaks with unmistakable emphasis your sturdy support of that cause and your determination to continue to support it until we have achieved a perfect and final victory. I shall not be able, fellow-citizens, to make up in any orderly and satisfactory way this afternoon the discussion of these public issues to which your thoughts are now so earnestly directed, because I have been plunged almost by the swiftness of railroad transportation from aboard the ship which brought me across the sea to this gathering in Charlestown to-day. I have had no single hour, I have had no possible opportunity of preparing such an address as ought to be given by me to such an audience as this and on such an occasion.

The issue in American politics is joinen between those who desire to hold on to whatever tariff reform we have achieved and continue the struggle for its complete and perfect attainment, and those who wish to do away with all we have gained and to return to the politics that have hitherto prevailed in this country. I do not believe I could speak to any audience having greater interest in this question than to an audience of the farmers and working people and to the citizens generally of the county of Jefferson. To rob a man of the fruits of his labor by unjust taxation is robbery indeed, but to deprive a man of the opportunity of toiling whereby he may secure the fruits of his labor is still worse robbery; and so far as you, fellow-citizens, are concerned, this question, the tariff, has become not so much a question of taxation, because you could stand up under taxation, as a question of markets, wherein you are to sell that which you produce, whether upon your farms or in your factories. We have reached that stage in the development of our country when we are compelled to have larger and larger markets for our surplus products, and such markets through foreign trade are the only safety-valve for the health and the prosperity of the American laborer in the field and in the factory. Fellow-citizens, I do not believe that there has been in this country, I doubt if there has been in any self-governing country, such an uprising of the people as we have seen during the struggle of the last ten years against our present system of federal taxation. It has been a wonderful, it has been an inspiring popular revolution, with its persistant effort, with its undimmed courage in defeat as well as in victory, with its enthusiasm, with its patriotic ardor, and I might almost say heroism. It has been a most notable public revolution and I, for one, do not believe it is to cease until the results secured have fully measured up to the order and the enthusiasm of the people. [Loud applause.]

On the one side lie good government, honest, economical government, freed industry, large and expending markets for the products of American labor and a general beckoning to an era of national and individual prosperity. On the other side lie corrupt government, fettered and imprisoned industry, limitations by law on the markets in which we are to sell and limitations by law on the amount which we can profitably produce. These are the two systems now at issue before the American people.

And as I have said before, giving a somewhat local application to what I am going to say to-day, the question for the farmers of Jefferson county is more markets for wheat, and for the mechanics is more markets for manufactured goods. If there was one thing to which I gave more anxious attention than any other during my brief absence from this country it was to the condition of the wheat market of the Old world. When I inquired why it was that wheat had gone down to a price much lower than it ever sold at before in the history of at least modern England and America, the answer was, there is a universal glut and a production beyond profitable demand. The answer is that not only is the United States increasing her surplus export of wheat and Russia increasing her surplus export of wheat, but Argentina is coming forward and is now third in the quantity, at least, exported to the European markets. I cannot but recall the fact, and I have stated it again and again before the people of this country, that the American tax upon the wools of Argentina had made them give up their "sheep-walks" and going into competition with you in the production of wheat. I say that it is for you to-day a question of markets, a question of consumers the world over for the products you produce. I believe so far as the great cereals are concerned, we produce enough to feed a population twice as large as our own. I believe so far as our staple manufactures are concerned, we produce enough to supply a population twice as large as our own.

The question is where we are to get these markets? Upon one system we have been building up for thirty years tariff walls to keep other people from coming in to compete with us in a home market already glutted. We have now begun to tear down our tariff walls to let us out with our products to compete with the rest of the world, with all the markets of the world.

Introducing Tree Planting.

Address by George W. Minier, Vice-President of the American Forestry Association.

MR. PRESIDENT, LADIES AND GENTLEMEN: I have ventured to write on a topic which belongs rather to youth or middle-age than to one who, to quote the words of Scotland's immortal poet, "has seen yon weary winter's sun twice forty times return," but my apology is, that vigorous youthful minds have not written or spoken on this subject.

The earth, to be adapted to the necessities of man, was clothed with verdure, among which was strewn a profusion of plants and shrubs, and all crowned with trees. Amidst all these man toils for existence and welfare.

Of all the mistakes made by man, since the first one in Eden, none has been more baneful than the thoughtless, indiscriminate destruction of forests.

Every thoughtful American has doubtless contemplated the aspect of his country when first visited by the white man. From the Atlantic to the Pacific, from the silvery lakes to the blue Gulf, an unbroken forest, save where the verdant prairies, the natural meadows of the interior, open their verdant bosoms and silently implore the agriculturist to partake of the blessings which nature has provided so bountifully.

In the eastern portion of our country, the Orient of the United States, if you please so to call it, the forests have been mostly removed, some by the woodman's axe, used for the aid and benefit of man; more, by the forest fires; and now, we see the mistake of the pioneers, and begin to feel the necessity of reformation. Some of our State governments, and the National, likewise, are making reservations, none to soon for the welfare of the people. Would any one hinder or retard this awakening to the interest of our common country? I hope not.

The naked hills, the bald mountains, the devastating floods, the rock and debris piled upon the plains, as well as the gulches in the fields and prairies, cry aloud for reformation.

The American Forestry Association is doing a good work. The Arbor Day invention (may I so call it) has become a necessity, a luxury, a blessing.

Shall we be satisfied with what is being done to preserve our forests, and reforest our now useless, worn out fields? How others may feel on this part of our labor I know not, but for myself I am not content. I want to see the planting of trees, the care of trees, and the preservation of trees go on until it permeates the nation; until taught in every school, from the public school to the university and cherished in every household.

In 1867 I read an essay before the Illinois State Horticultural Society in the city of Jacksonville, in the presence of the Presidents and Professors of their Colleges, and the Chairman of the Committee of Education, of the Senate and House of Representatives, on introducing the natural sciences into our public schools. Through the efforts of members of the Senate and the House a law was enacted, and three more sciences were added to our common school curriculum, which are, if my memory is not at fault, Natural Philosophy, Botany and Physiology. To these, Mr. President, I would like to see added the art of Tree-Planting. I want this noble and refining art begun in childhood and fostered in families.

We all know how almost impossible it is to change the feelings and correct the habits of old people. To attempt the reformation of an old man is like trying to strengthen the crooked and distorted trees in a forest. With the application of guy-ropes and pulleys one may possibly straighten one in a year, and more than likely kill it in the operation. Go to the saplings, and we may straighten a hundred in a day, and injure none of them, so we may impress the beauty of trees, the grandeur of forests, and the charms of the landscape upon childhood, but make little impression on mature years or old age.

Our roadsides and railways may be and ought to be planted with trees, either fruit or ornamental, and thus both beauty and utility combined to make the earth which God has given into the custody of man, beautiful as was Eden before the wily serpent persuaded the fairest of women to barter Paradise, for the curiosity of being the first to taste forbidden fruit.

Children take to planting seeds and transplanting trees as instinctively as ducks do to water. To them it is a source of pleasure which needs little or no encouragement. All they ask is opportunity.

Let us encourage tree planting as well as tree preservation in childhood, in families, in schools of every grade; the public schools especially. There it is that nineteen-twentieths of the people get all the education they ever get in schools. Our common schools therefore are nineteen times more important to us, as a nation, than our colleges and universities.

And now you will permit me to say that at my age, I dare not promise myself the pleasure of meeting with you again in your official capacity. I desire to assure you that you will always have my cordial wishes for your success in whatever elevates, purifies and adorns humanity. And I pray that we may leave the world wiser, happier and more beautiful for our having lived in it.

From and About the Periodicals.

Dr. Carl Lumholtz, the explorer, concludes his observations on the Tarahumari—the Mexican cave-dwellers, in October Scribner. In this paper he describes their dances and their strange plant worship with other superstitions. The illustrations have been drawn with great fidelity from the author's own photographs and show subjects which have been never before depicted.

Harper's Weekly for September 15th contains a fine double-page picture of the United States Senate in session, drawn by G. W. Breck, with forty-six portraits of leading members and officers. The new Boston Public Library is the subject of a page illustration, and the annual "high jinks" of the celebrated Bohemian Club of San Francisco is picturesquely described and strikingly illustrated by Charles R. Graham. Another interesting page of illustrations is made up of the principal prize-winners in the New York State Fair at Syracuse. The recent destructive floods in Texas and the new United States infantry rifle—the Krag-Jorgensen—are fully treated in picture and text. Professor F. W. Taussig contributes a careful analysis of the new Tariff law, and "Amateur Sport" treats of the coming international cricket-matches, and shows two excellent views of the New York Athletic Club at Travers Island.

IN his article in the October Forum, President Eliot, of Harvard, draws attention to the striking fact that the three nations which have given the greatest proofs of constitutional vigor—namely, Germany, England, and the United States—are those which, in religious opinions and practices, are very hexterogeneous, so that no concentrated religious fevor can possibly melt and unite all their people.

The Forum, in eleven timely articles, by as many distinguished writers, presents to its readers the latest results of original investigation and research in many fields of keen general interest,—the larger political and social tendencies of the Republic, the Japan-China War, Socialism, international politics, raidroad problems, education, literature, etc.

Bedding for Farm Animals.

A great variety of bedding-materials are employed in different localities, and each farmer will, of course, select for his own use such of these as are the cheapest and most available. In lumbering districts, where saw mills abound, farmers find cheap bedding in the sawdust and shavings that are produced in such large quantities. Sawdust makes clean, tidy bedding, but the impression is quite strong among farmers that its effect upon the soil is not desirable. Certainly it decays very slowly. The common beach sand near the seashore possesses, when dry, good absorbing power, and affords a comfortable bed for stock. It is, however, very heavy to handle, and its application, in the manure, to land already too sandy, as is much of the land bordering upon the seacoast, is not a good practice. Meadow and salt hay, and the straw of our small grains, supply excellent bedding, and by their decay return a large amount of humus to the soil. Their use should be supplemented by the employment of some dry material, such as loam, dust, sifted coal ashes, or land plaster, so that all the gases and liquid manure may be saved. It is a simple matter for every farmer to lay by a supply of dry absorbents. By stirring the soil frequently over a small area, the earth rapidly dries out, and becomes dust under the heat of a summer's sun. All that is left to do is to gather the dry material and store it in a dry place. Every autumn our shade and forest trees shed their leaves, a wealth of the best of bedding, that, having absorbed manurial substances, decay into the best of manure.

BUILDING A STACK OF CORN FODDER.

Corn fodder may be stacked when it is so well cured in the shock that it will not sweat much in the stack, thus insuring its keeping sweet. The amount of sap remaining in the stalk can be judged by twisting it, and examining the pith. If the fodder is so dry that the leaves break badly choose a damp, drizzly or foggy day for handling it. Otherwise much of the most nutritious food will be lost, and the sharp midribs will tear the clothing to tatters. For hauling from the field a low wagon is best. Have the front wheels about three feet in diameter, and the hind wheels six inches larger. The rack may be made with open spaces between the boards, but a tight level floor is best to prevent waste and for convenience to the loader in walking and in sliding the heavy stalks. These should be grasped by the tops and swung on to the load, be laid across the rack with the stocks parallel, and the butts all in the same direction. Unless the fodder is husked it is too heavy for large loads. Drive the load so that the tops will be toward the stack, and then lift and pull off the bunches of stalks in the reverse order from which they were loaded, avoiding all tangling and confusion. The middle of the stack or rick must be kept so full that the outside stalks will have a steep slope outward and downward. Top with long straw or hay.

A DISPATCH from Ellwood, Indiana, October 9, says: "The mills were started up at the American tinplate factory last night, and President Leeds has informed the men that there will be no reduction in wages." It is announcements of this kind from the North, South, East and West that knock the stuffing out of calamity orations.—Ex.

THE Republican newspapers which on Saturday a week put the Democratic majority in Georgia at 10,000 (in large type) were obliged to raise it to 30,000 (in small type) on Monday. The truth is that the Democratic defeat of the Republican-Populist combination in Georgia was a decisive and effectual triumph which has terribly disappointed the Protectionist leaders.

Flight of Burning Locomotive.

Downingtown, Pa., Oct. 4.—The news-express on the Pennsylvania Railroad dashed up to the station here this morning with the engine-cab ablaze. The engineer had finished a thrilling race with the fire, and barely came out ahead. Just before Whiteland Station was reached the engineer discovered that the floor of the cab was on fire, having caught from the ash pan beneath the fire-box and the fire was rapidly gaining in headway. The train was stopped and an endeavor made to extinguish the flames, but without avail. After a few minutes of futile work the engineer decided to make a run for Downingtown, where a hose could be procured. He mounted the cab, pulled the throttle wide open and with a stream of fire and smoke issuing from the cab the train shot forward. The railroad officials say the speed was never before greater on that stretch of track. A hose was turned upon the fire here. The engineer had saved his locomotive.

WITHOUT THE Non-pull-out BOW (RING)
It is easy to steal or ring watches from the pocket. The thief gets the watch in one hand, the chain in the other and gives a quick jerk—the ring slips off the watch stem, and away goes the watch, leaving the victim only the chain.
This idea stopped that little game:
The bow has a groove on each end. A collar runs down inside the pendant (stem) and fits into the grooves, firmly locking the bow to the pendant, so that it cannot be pulled or twisted off.

WILLING WORKERS
of either sex, any age, in any part of the country, at the employment which we furnish. You need not be away from home over night. You can give your whole time to the work, or only your spare moments. As capital is not required you run no risk. We supply you with all that is needed. It will cost you nothing to try the business. Any one can do the work. Beginners make money from the start. Failure is unknown with our workers. Every hour you labor you can easily make a dollar. No one who is willing to work fails to make more money every day than can be made in three days at any ordinary employment. Send for free book containing the fullest information.
